WAR CHESTS OF EUROPE HEAVY WITH GOLD COIN

European authorities figured that when the Balkan war began and there was dread among the common people of Europe that a general war might result, nearly $350,000,000 in gold was hoarded in three countries. In sums ranging from a gold piece or two up to tens of thousands of dollars. Austria-Hungary was credited with hiding away $150,000,000, Germany $95,000,000 and France $120,000,000. This was money which had been traced into those countries just before the Balkan hostilities began and after war started. In addition to this vast sum there was an unguessable quantity of gold already buried in the ground. Russia is believed to have tens of thousands of hoarders of money. It is utterly impossible to guess at the amount of gold which the people of Russia have put into the ground or into the cellars of their homes. The sign of wealth would mean the coming of the tax collector, and among the men who look poor are owners of countless wealth in gold.

Vast sums of gold and silver coin have gone into Russia, which seldom lets go of it. The great imperial war chest behind it, if the signs mean anything, other sums in little war chests—gold which the government might draw out if it offered lands for sale, or bonds the people would trust, or opportunities in commerce heretofore denied them.

England has its hidden hoards, no one knows how large or how many, but there is concealed in England nothing like the amount that is hidden in continental Europe, where foreign armies have only to cross a surveyed boundary line or a little creek to raid their enemies. Turkey, whose people have been terrorized for ages, has more lost hoards than the world will ever know about, because there the hoarding has gone on for ages, during which armies have swung up and down the denuded lands, tearing down cities and destroying everything that could give comfort or sustenance to an enemy.

Spain has millions of dollars in gold, silver, pearls and gems buried and lost in a thousand ancient castles, monasteries and other public buildings. In the heyday of her glory Spain imported countless millions of gold and silver from the Americas and faithless officials made away with great sums in bullion, hiding it away—and many of them never recovered it.

India is the bottomless pit of the world's gold. In one year India imported $300,000,000, and there has never been a time, apparently, when India was not importing gold, silver and precious jewels. In the temples of India there are said to be $1,500,000,000 in precious metal and precious stones. India has more fine pearls than all the rest of the world put together. They have even gold cannons there—cannons that weigh 280 pounds each.

The tourist sees some of this gold; if a visitor should attend a function given by one of the princes of India he would see jewels whose value he could not estimate. Afghan, Mogul, Tartar, raiding through India, found millions upon millions, but the troops did not find it all. In the ground, in places where none could find or would suspect, was the vast wealth which the natives of India bury, and keep buried. The Amerer of Bokhara, a Russian vassal in Central Asia, is said to have been accumulating a hoard amounting to $8,000,000 a year, and this is kept in a great vault where Russia might possibly find a resource in case of need. In Egypt and along the north shore of Africa the Barbary Coast people have their hoards estimated by the millions. The lost treasure of the Incas is estimated at $600,000,000 in gold.

No one is able to guess the amount of gold that has been looted in the history of the world by raiding armies. When the wars of old were waged billions of treasure changed hands from the vanquished to the victors. The treasure was commonly the public funds. Men known to have wealth were held for ransom. Captured treasure, cut to pieces out by bit in the effort to compel the revelation of hiding places.

In the ruins of Carthage is a vault that holds the treasure of the vandal Genseric, which was not found when Carthage finally fell. The buried treasure of Carcasone in southern France was put away when the Huns and Slavs ranged over Europe trying to exterminate the Latins. Alaric the Goth looted Rome and cached his treasure in Carcasone, tradition says, in a deep cave and killed the men who helped him stow it away, and it has never been found.

This treasure was part of it from Solomon's Temple, Titus having raided Jerusalem and made away with the treasure that Solomon had gathered up and which was part of it looted that King David had captured in his great wars of conquest and defense. There was the accumulation of ten centuries of profit in the Temple of Solomon.

The loot of ancient Rome, the loot of Constantinople, of Calcutta, Bombay, Peking, with the treasure ships captured at sea, paid the price of capture. There were raids on the treasure towns of Spanish America which made the pirates wealthy. But the capture of Babylon and the exaction of ransom failed to compensate the victors from about the time of the Napoleonic wars.

Wars of conquest followed wars seeking loot. Nevertheless the modern wars are accompanied by opportunities of loot which are hardly paralleled in ancient history. Thus the defeat of France resulted in the payment to Germany of $1,000,000,000 after the war of 1870—a tribute payment hardly rivaled in ancient days. If France and Russia should conquer, Germany will doubtless be compelled to stagger under such an exaction of tribute as no ancient Caesar ever dreamed.

If the hoards of Europe could be tapped—if the hidden treasures of European cities could be tapped by in-

M. of said day or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, in the courtroom of said court, in the Courthouse in Honolulu, City and County of Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, the first publication to be on the 25th day of August, A. vading armies—the possibilities of loot in jewels and precious metals are beyond compute. But all the loot possible would not compensate for the hundreds of thousands of ounces of gold which must be paid each day for army sustenance and equipment. In olden times wars were paid for themselves, reckoning from the viewpoint of the victors. Wars were then for loot. The ships of the conquerors returned from across the seas with treasure—they even went to war loaded with treasure for emergencies, as witness the Spanish Armada, whose gold is still the dream of fortune seekers.

The war chests of Europe are supposed to contain about $2,000,000,000 in gold coin and bullion. What possibilities of loot this indicates is in some measure understandable when one considers that this means about 50,000 tons of yellow metal—and no mention is made of the bushels of diamonds, rubies, pearls and gems also in peril.

NEW DIESEL FOR PACIFIC OIL FLEET

To enter into the oil carrying trade in the Pacific, a new type of Diesel propelled steamer has made its appearance along the coast of Asia. The vessel reached Shanghai at the time the Pacific Mail Manchuria prepared to steam for Japanese ports. Operated by the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company, the steamer Artemis is the first tank ship driven by Diesel engines to enter Shanghai harbor and represents the last word in this type of vessel.

She has a length of 346 ft. 8 in., beam 48 ft., and total depth of 25 ft. 6 in., with full load draught of 22 ft., the carrying capacity representing about 5000 tons of oil.

The propelling plant consists of two sets of Workshop Diesel type engines operating on the four cycle principle, and developing 1100 h. p. each, or about 850 b. h. p. at 125 r. p. m. Each engine has six cylinders.

There are two sets of fuel pumps for each engine, but when running normally only one is in use.

The fuel carried is sufficient for about 90 days continual running without bunkering, the engines using about seven tons per day, and about 800 tons are carried in a cross bunker forward of the engine room, but separated from it by cofferdam, the balance being carried in wing tanks.

There is a two-cylinder high speed Diesel engine having an auxiliary air compressor disposed between the cyl-

Inders, and this is usually running when the engines are maneuvering in port. This engine can also drive the ship's dynamo, situated on a gallery above, and normally driven by means of a Deutz oil engine of the horizontal type of about 15 h. p.

All the deck cargo winches are steam driven, as are also the steering engine and main cargo pumps, and for this purpose a marine type donkey boiler is installed.

The steering engine is right aft and enclosed in a separate room. The chains are coupled to a circle instead of the usual quadrant, and there are powerful buffer springs attached to the circle and a screw clamp which enables the gear to be gripped in any position in the event of the chain carrying away. On the bridge the steering is controlled through a telemotor of the latest type.

The whole of the pipe and valve arrangements for cargo handling are of the latest type. The life boats are fitted with Wellin's patent davits and two are capable of accommodating the whole ship's complement, there being four lifeboats provided with a carrying capacity of 31 persons each.

The captain and officers are quartered in a steel house amidships, and have extremely comfortable cabins; the engineers have similar accommodation on the poop deck right aft. The rest of the crew and firemen are on the main deck below the engineers.

The Artemis was built in the naval yard at Amsterdam, being the last merchant vessel that will be built here. Her speed in ballast is about 11 1/2 knots, and 10 1/2 fully loaded.

Four-bladed propellers have been substituted for the original three-bladed ones, the speed of the vessel being thereby increased by about half a knot.

On the trip out no trouble of any kind was experienced with the main engines, which performed consistently and well over the whole period.
